

Adjunct Professor of Law
Jason A. Biros

J.D. Columbia Law School/European University Institute
M.Sc in International Relations, London School of Economics and Political Science
A.B. Politics, Princeton University

Jason Biros served as Legal Adviser to the United States Mission to the European Union from 2015 to 2018. In this position he advised actively on international, U.S., and EU law relating to all aspects of EU-U.S. relations including in particular in the fields of national security and intelligence law, law enforcement cooperation, data protection and cross-border data transfers, political-military cooperation, sanctions, Brexit, state aid/competition law, trade, and treaty law.

Prior to this he worked in the United States Department of State's Office of the Legal Adviser in Washington, D.C., in the Office for Law Enforcement and Intelligence. He served as primary legal counsel to the Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research and provided advice regarding U.S. and international law on a broad range of intelligence matters, including intelligence collection and analysis and intelligence sharing. He further advised on various transnational law enforcement matters, including extradition, mutual legal assistance, and law enforcement cooperation between the United States and various European and Asian countries. He also served in the Office for Employment Law, handling a broad portfolio of employment management and litigation matters.

Prior to joining the Office of the Legal Adviser, he worked in private practice in Washington, and was a law clerk at the International Court of Justice in The Hague